UM WILL ADOPT NINE FOREIGN STUDENTS TEMPORARILY

MISSOULA--

Two international groups will call Missoula "home" for a few days this month and next as they visit the University of Montana during cross-country foreign exchange programs.

The first group to arrive will be 10 Italians who are participating in an "Experiment in International Living." They will be accompanied by Vittorio Vassallo, a former diplomatic representative to the United States from Italy.

Several of the six men and three women "experimenters" are college students and three have been teachers for several years. Their cross-country tour began Wednesday when they arrived in Hartford, Conn. They will return home from New York on Sept. 17, after staying in Missoula, July 26-Aug. 9, and in Enterprise, Ore. for a three weeks stay in American homes.

The second group is comprised of three Africans, who are students in England. They are touring the United States under sponsorship of the African-American Institute.

During their July 29-Aug. 3 stay on the UM campus, they will be orientated to American education and student affairs. Charles Wade, the University's foreign student adviser, said the U.S. State Department recommended that UM be included in the program as a typical American university.

A group of Swedes visited the Missoula campus last summer under sponsorship of the "Experiment in International Living." This is the first tour sponsored by the African-American Institute.
